

Come home to Barn Pros

Affordable luxury for horses and horse lovers

Photos courtesy of Barn Pros

WHAT DOES IT MEAN to live the equine lifestyle? Is it some essence captured within the scent of fresh hay and a cool breeze over grass that soothes the horse-lover's soul? Is it a vision of flowing manes and majestically arched necks as horses run free under the setting sun? Or the feeling of flight as the ground passes by, thundering through nature like wind itself on a horse's back?

No. These things are only a part of the whole, small pieces of what horse people know in their bones is the life they were meant to lead. For many of us, we are content to say, "home is where the horse is." But there is more to the equestrian dream than running and riding and being the breeze.

The truth of it is, horses require a lot of care. For committed horse people, this isn't a hardship... but sometimes the location or situation makes it more of a chore than it ought to be.

The Right Place

What if having the barn of your—and your horse's—dreams was within your grasp? A barn built of warm wood, of light and air. A safe place, designed and created by people who understood the needs of horses and horse owners. A barn of classic design and quality, with chew protection and rubber matting in every stall, just as fancy or just as plain as you want it to be. A barn good enough to live in yourself, either in a one- or two-bedroom loft apartment above the stalls, or a separate barn home to match your horse's living quarters, designed with quality and comfort in mind.

Barn Pros says, "Change is not as complicated as you think."

Making the Change

Shopping around for barn manufacturers can be a daunting task. Where do you start? You can drive through the countryside, looking for barns you like, but then what? It's not as if they're signed works of art (though some of them ought to be). Short of catching someone out in the field and asking who built the building in question, it's hard to know.

In recent years, the Internet has become a great tool to do research before making a purchase, and Barn Pros, based in Monroe, WA, has a website that proves the nature-loving lifestyle and modern convenience can go hand in hand. The Barn Pros site offers detailed photo and video tours, floor plans, all kinds of product information, and an online store with everything do-it-yourselfers need to upgrade a barn on their own or order a complete barn kit to assemble at home. At least 50% of Barn Pros customers assemble their own barns, but for those without a basic construction background or who don't have the time, the Barn Pros team will help you find qualified professionals in your area, wherever you may be.

Tack room office

Barn Pros offers a behind-the-scenes look at their barns and barn homes from the ground up. Floor plans for every model are easily accessible, with options, sizing, pricing, items included, and everything else you need to know all clearly stated and easy to find. Whether you're looking for a few stall fronts and some paneling to upgrade your current building, or pricing out your dream home and barn, you can do it all from the comfort of your home, office, tack room, or anywhere you have an Internet connection. From the highly affordable "Cimarron" series to a luxurious 8-stall "Clydesdale" with loft apartment, Barn Pros believes that luxury should be available to everyone... and every horse.

Barn Pros loft apartment package

The Time is Now

Take some time. Visit www.barnpros.com. Raise your head and sniff that hay-scented breeze. Remember, change is not as complicated as you think.

NWHS